the moral and ethical priorities that will guide all the school's activities. We believe that students always come first.

Developmental Responsiveness

Our school responds to the unique challenges our students face by looking for different ways to address students' physical, emotional, social, and educational needs.

- In the physical aspect, our campus enforces the sports-in-season concept implemented by the district. The purpose of this district initiative is to align what is taught in the Physical Education (PE) classes to the sport that is taking place throughout the seasons. This will allow all PE classes to involve students in learning and participating in all sports.

- School counselors are critical as they hold constant and consistent meetings with students as a group or on an individual basis.

- At Valley View Early College, it is necessary for school counselors to intervene in students' social needs as well. They help discuss topics of teenage identity, how to solve problems at school and at home, patriotism, problem solving, time management, organizational skill and other pertinent areas.

- Our teachers and counselors schedule rotations to ensure that students are supported daily and by class period. The special education program's caseworkers and curriculum specialists ensure that every student assessment, from weekly quizzes to benchmarks, offer the accommodations required for each student to meet a passing standard and ensure their success.

Social Equity

The campus provides every student with high quality teachers, effective instructional resources, and research-based learning opportunities. Teachers are highly qualified, evident by the teaching certificate issued by the State Board for Educator Certification, which every teacher is required to hold. Core area teachers use progress-monitoring charts to monitor the progress of all students.

Organizational Support

We are a learning organization that establishes norms, structures, and organizational arrangements to support and sustain a trajectory toward excellence. The school enforces the district initiative to teach students about morals and virtues and put these into practices. Each week the campus reviews on principal moral and announces it over the intercom to encourage students to be ethical and to exhibit good moral character on a daily basis and through out each day.
